“I want that machine working within the month, Dr. Lucas, or I will find someone who can get it working for me and do it in the time-frame that is required!” Hitler was as angry as the doctor had ever seen, or even heard of for that matter.

“Yes, sir! I will double my efforts to ensure you have it working as promised.” Dr. Franz Lucas was having to really focus on keeping his hefty frame from shaking. He wasn’t very tall. Five feet and eight inches was not very intimidating to begin with, but even with his stocky frame, he weighed 195 pounds, he was intimidated just by being in this room. Adolph Hitler only beat him by an inch in height, but then, Hitler was very much larger than life and was most assuredly intimidating.

“Of course, you will.” Hitler was now speaking in a more pleasant tone, but there was no pleasantries in him, just cold, calculating hatred for the Jews. “You understand that Die Glocke is needed to complete my plan to remove the Jews from this planet once and for all!” The room was large and expensively furnished, but all of that faded away to nothing as Lehovec listened. This living nightmare was causing a pit to grow in his stomach that got larger the longer The Fuhrer ranted.

“Until that happens, the Jews will continue to pollute the world with their presence and I will not allow that to happen when I have the ability to remove them from existence completely! My plan to send a bomb back in time to the only point where the entire Jewish nation will all be in one place at the same time will guarantee my success!” Hitler was now pacing back and forth in front of the desk where Dr. Lucas stood, and his face reddened like it always did when The Fuhrer gave a speech he was passionate about. Despite the cool air coming in through the open windows, Lucas was sweating now. His short, brown hair was starting to mat, and he hoped it would go unnoticed.

Hitler suddenly stopped his pacing and snapped around to face Lucas. “Where and when will the bomb be sent? Where will they all be in one place at the same time? The answer, oddly enough, comes out of their own Scriptures. At the crossing of the Red Sea when they are leaving Egypt. They will all be trapped between the Red Sea and the Egyptian army. This new atom bomb that I am developing will be sent back to eliminate all of them at the same time.”
